[FSX]Airbus Series Evolution Vol.1 Download - Wilco Publishing. Buy Airbus Series Evolution Vol. 1. [FS2004] (Add-on Only) by Q: Django migrations crashes on back button I have a Django application in which users can sign up for accounts. After they sign up, I need to change their password. I have a view that creates the User object, and when the user selects that object, it will redirect them to the Change password page. I'm using Django Rest Framework, and I'm performing the migration on the server. It's a rest-api, so I don't want to do any db-level migrations. When the user clicks the Change Password button, it will pass the user object to a serializer, which will create a serialized version of the User object. Then, it will perform the migrations to change the password, send the response, and then redirect the user back to the Change Password page. Here is the view: def account_info(request): if request.method == 'POST': serializer = UserSerializer(request.POST, instance=request.user) if serializer.is_valid(): serializer.save() return Response(serializer.data, status=status.HTTP_201_CREATED) else: return Response(serializer.errors, status=status.HTTP_400_BAD_REQUEST) else: serializer = UserSerializer(instance=request.user) return Response(serializer.data) Here is the serializer: class UserSerializer(serializers.ModelSerializer): class Meta: model = User fields = ('id', 'username', 'email', 'password', 'first_name', 'last_name', 'street', 'number', 'city', 'state',
